

MANDATORY TRAFFIC SIGNS

This sign is used on roadways where traffic is required to stop before entering a major road. The vehicle shall proceed past the stop line only after ascertaining that this will not cause any damage to traffic on the main road.

This sign is used to assign right-of-way to traffic on certain roadways and intersections, the intention being that the vehicles controlled by the sign must give way to the other traffic having the right-of-way.

These signs are located at places where the vehicles are not allowed to enter. It is generally erected at the end of one-way-road to prohibit traffic entering the roadway in the wrong direction and also at each intersection along the one-way road.

These signs are located at places where the vehicles are not allowed to enter. It is generally erected at the end of one-way-road to prohibit traffic entering the roadway in the wrong direction and also at each intersection along the one-way road.

These signs are located at the entry to the one-way street and repeated at intermediate intersections on that street.

This sign is used on stretches of the road where sounding of horn is not allowed, near hospitals and in silence zones.

This sign is erected on each entry to the road where cycles are to be prohibited.

This sign is erected on each entry to the road where pedestrians are to be prohibited.

This sign is used at the entrance to the road where movement of trucks is prohibited.

These signs are used at places where vehicles are not allowed to make a turn to the right or left. The signs are also used at the inter-sections of one-way street to supplement the one-way sign.

This sign is used at places where vehicles are forbidden to make a turn to the reverse direction of travel between the sign and the next inter-section beyond it.

This sign is erected at the beginning of such sections of highways where sight distance is restricted and overtaking will be dangerous.

This sign is used at places where entry to all types of motor vehicles is prohibited.

This sign is erected on each entry to the road where hand carts are to be prohibited.

This sign is erected on each entry to the road where bullock carts are to be prohibited.

TONGA This sign is erected on each entry to the road where tongas are to be prohibited.

This sign is erected on each entry to the road where all types of slow moving vehicles except cycles are to be prohibited.

This sign is erected where parking is not allowed but vehicles can stop for short duration to allow passengers to get into or get out of the vehicle. The sign should be accompanied by suitable kerb or carriageway markings.

This sign is erected on each entry to the road where all types of slow moving vehicles except cycles are to be prohibited.

This sign is erected where vehicles are prohibited to stop even temporarily.

This sign is erected at the beginning of the section of the road or area covered by a speed restriction, with numerals indicating the speed limit in kilometers per hour.

This sign is used where entry of vehicles exceeding a particular width is prohibited.

This sign is erected in advance of an overhead structure where entry is prohibited for vehicles whose height exceeds a certain limit.

This sign is used where entry of vehicles exceeding a particular length is prohibited.

This sign is used where entry of vehicles is prohibited for vehicles whose laden weight exceeds a certain limits.

This sign is used where entry of vehicles is prohibited for vehicles whose axle load exceeds a certain limits.

This sign indicates the point at which all prohibitions notified by prohibitory signs for moving of vehicles cease to apply.

These signs indicate the appropriate direction in which the vehicles are permitted to proceed.

These signs indicate the appropriate directions in which the vehicles are permitted to proceed. Vehicles are supposed to move either of the given two directions.

This sign indicates that the vehicle is only permitted to proceed ahead.

This sign is most frequently used on bollards or islands and refuges in the middle of the carriageway and at the beginning of central reserves of dual carriageway. The vehicles are obliged to keep left only.

This sign means only cycles and rickshaws are allowed on this road/carriageway.

This sign means the motor vehicles shall compulsorily sound horn at the location where the sign is placed. This sign is mostly put at sharp curves on hill roads.

This sign means the vehicles can either go straight or turn left.

This sign means the vehicles can either go straight or turn right.

This sign means only pedestrians are allowed and the traffic is not allowed on this road/carriageway.

This sign means that only buses are allowed and other traffic is not allowed on this road/carriageway.

This sign is used on roadways where traffic is required to stop before entering a major road. The vehicle shall proceed past the stop line only after ascertaining that this will not cause any damage to traffic on the main road.